World's Shortest Mountain Biking Track Imagine having an adventure without breaking a sweat, all the while knowing you are riding one of the most challenging, but also one of the most scenic, paths on the planet. This might sound hard to believe, but it is the reality for anyone who travels to the Hoerselberg Mountain, a 10 km long skiing slope just outside of Hannover in northern Germany. On top of the mountain lies the World's Shortest Mountain Bike Track, where 1,200 people per hour can test their mountain bike skills, by pedaling the dirt track of the Hoerselberg Mountain. While the track can be used for any mountain biking activities, it is best for racing to prepare yourself for a half marathon or full marathon on the slopes of the Hoerselberg. The Hoerselberg Mountain is a 365,000 square foot ski area that also offers snowboarding, cross-country skiing, and Nordic skiing. At the Hoerselberg, the extreme mountain biking event takes place on the third weekend of June. "The Hoerselberg is known as the wild side of town," explains Tom C f3e1b3768c
